My Weaving of Lies

##

Lies

By Andamorph

I go through battles, bloody and terrible, > I stay up nights and get no sleep,  Sometimes I think that it's not bearable, > This secret that I always keep!

And the battles aren't the worst of it, > Nor is the loss of the world I knew,  It's not the killings that I commit,
> It's all the lying that I do!

For now I lie all of the time, > I used to be so honest, too!  It always makes me feel like slime,
> If my parents only knew!

A small lie here, then there, then soon,
> My lies pile up on top one another,  My lies weaving like yarn on a loom,
> They weave in and out and fall on eachother.

And my parents, they would never guess > how much always lie to them,  It would bring them such distress!
> To know I lie time and again.
